A Queer Ornament.

Some years ago we found in a secret drawer of a pearl embroidered workbox three locks of hair fastened to small enamel heart shaped mounts, with silver eyelets. Two were inscribed "R. When I showed these hair earrings to a gentleman of some considerable learning he informed me that an uncle of Anne, wife of King James I., was afflicted by a malady, still prevalent in Dalack and Dackson and D of Anne, wife of King James I., was afflicted by a malady, still prevalent in Poland and some parts of Russia, which consists of a growth of hair and flesh pendent from the ear, on which it is dangerous to operate owing to the profuse hemorrhage which ensues. He added that in consequence of this royal infirmity a fashion arose in the city teenth and seventeenth centuries to warring locks of hair pendent from the left ears. I believe there is a portrait of a Stuart lady still at Ham House so adorned.—London Notes and Queries.
